Georgia Trial Lawyers Association's Lead Program

It was a great opportunity to speak with state representatives about the importance of protecting the right to trial by jury, a fundamental principle of the 7th Amendment and a cornerstone of access to justice.

Did you know...

The image is a screenshot of a social media post from the law firm Fry Goehring. At the top left, the profile picture shows the 'FG' logo, followed by the name 'Fry Goehring' and the timestamp 'March 6 at 2:21PM'. Below this, the text reads 'After an accident, not all injuries are visible... See more'. The main content is a dark blue graphic with a glowing brain silhouette on the left. Text on the graphic includes 'AFTER AN ACCIDENT... THE DAMAGE ISN'T ALWAYS VISIBLE' in large yellow and white letters, and 'March is National Brain Injury Awareness Month' in white. A smaller inset image shows a woman sitting on the ground next to a damaged car, holding her head in pain. Text next to this image says 'WHAT IS A TRAUMATIC BRAIN INJURY?' and 'It is damage to the brain caused by strong blow or jolt to the head, common in car accidents.' At the bottom of the graphic, the firm's logo and name are repeated, along with the slogan 'YOUR HEALTH Comes First!' and contact information: 'Free Consultation 404-969-1284 www.frygoehring.com'. 'Swipe...' text is visible on the right side of the graphic, indicating it's a carousel post.

Delayed Pain After Car Accidents: Why It Matters Legally

In the aftermath of car collisions, many victims walk away without major injuries – only to discover them hours, days, or weeks later. This phenomenon, called delayed pain, warrants health concerns and affects personal injury lawsuits. Let's discuss why it happens, its legal impact, and the steps victims must take.
